

A community woven with passion and purpose.

At The Commons, resident Henry Moss partners with like-minded residents to shape our future through nature and community.

The heart of The Commons is its people. When Henry Moss and his wife, Emily, moved from Concord, they found not just a home but a community enriched by shared experiences. With over four decades' experience in sustainable design, Henry now lends his thoughtful approach to creating harmony between buildings and their environment. His passion is woven into the fabric of The Commons, where residents' experiences and knowledge shape the community and help us—and each other—grow.

This collaborative spirit extends directly into our campus expansion plans. The Commons is adding 28 new Independent Living residences. More than just homes, they reflect our commitment to sustainability, innovation and a connected community where expertise becomes legacy.

Visit The Commons and discover a place where your passions take root. Call 781-625-9320 or visit TheCommonsinLincoln.com

“It is about creating a legacy—years from now, when new residents are enjoying the shade of these trees or watching butterflies in the gardens, they will be experiencing something we all created together.”

—Resident Henry M.
